

What about experiencing the joy of receiving the reply of letters after the months of patience?

We live in a world of technology. Science has made our lives much easier as well as faster with respect to many aspects of living. It is not only catering our needs, instead providing us with series of comforts as well. Fast communication via different platforms, for example, social media and emails are one of the amazing comforts, the technology has bestowed us with.

Let's recall the old time:

We often wonder how different life would have been decades back. We are quite used to the luxuries and comforts provided by the digital world. We cannot even imagine a life without it. But the fact is that our ancestors have lived a life without all of these technological luxuries.

There was no faster source of communication instead of telegrams and letters. All, the people could do was write a letter, post it and then wait for months. The process was long. It took time for the letter to reach the recipient and then his/her letter to reach back to the sender. All this sounds so strenuous, doesn't it?

Well, indeed all this did require a lot of patience element. But the interesting part is the amount of happiness the people would feel after receiving the letters from their loved ones after a long time of patience. It is always a great pleasure to attain something once you waited for it as it is a very difficult task for humans due to their impatient nature.

What about going back?

Well, how would it be to go back to those times? The first thought in our mind is supposed to be, NO WAYS. It is because of our level of addiction for these comforts. But there are many hidden elements of happiness and joy in past times.

In those times, all that mattered was the value one had for the other person because there was no fakeness of the social media world. That distance held a significant role in maintaining the level of worth one held for the other person. This digital world has provided us with a very efficient and comfortable lifestyle, but it has decreased the quality of life to a great extent. So, what are your viewpoints about going back to the old times?

If you had a pen pal friend...

How will it be if you have a pen pal friend? How would it feel to write a letter to your friend and then patiently wait for him/her to reply back? It does feel impossible as the world of technology has completely eradicated the virtue of patience from our lives. But, it's NOT impossible. So, what about giving it a try?

Are you ready to experience that joy of receiving the reply to the letter from your friend after a month of patience?
